Arts, Culture, and Civil Society

This course will examine the arts, culture, and civil society as important theoretical concerns for contemporary social criticism, political theory, and cultural policy-making. Ranging from the nature of current-day urban formations, nation-states, and local communities to the analysis of power, modernity, and discourse as tied to the arts, a key concern in this class is familiarizing one with a range of approaches analytical to politics, culture, and the arts in contemporary global society. The goals of the course are to provide:

- 1) Introduce ideas and practices of critical cultural analysis with regard to art, civil society, and contemporary culture.
- 2) Provide an overview of arts and culture practices in the USA and other nation-states with regard to their impact on civil society, political community, and economic growth.
- 3) Develop a basic sense of the major theoretical debates and conceptual problems in arts and culture analysis.
- 4) Outline the complex relationships between the local, regional, national, and global economy that the arts and culture organizations play in maintaining the working of civil society as well as the processes of economic growth.
- 5) Build a practical sense of how culture and arts organizations operate as nonprofit entities and build contacts between local organizations and the cultural community.
- 6) Position the politics of the arts, culture, and civil society during global economic change, including the neo-liberal local, national, and transnational structuring of space, class, and exchange.

The seminar format of the course will emphasize class discussion and critical writing. All members of the class will be expected to participate actively in the course by doing the assigned readings and contributing to class discussion. Parts of the course might be conducted online during times that the instructor is traveling to meetings or for lectures.

Student grades will be based upon the following guidelines:

- (1) An analytical study of a specific arts, culture, and civil society project in action or a more interpretive theoretical essay of 15-20 typed pages (40%). The paper topic must be discussed with me in advance to approve the topic, otherwise the paper will not be accepted. This assignment is an opportunity for you to do some additional research on a subject or theme in political or social theory that interests you, and it will be due near the end of the semester.

- (2) A short book critique of 6-8 typed pages (20%). This critique is intended to sharpen your critical faculties by thoroughly reviewing, criticizing, and discussing a work of political or social theory.
- (3) Weekly reading journals on the assigned texts of 1-3 typed pages (20%). These essays are meant for you to clarify your thoughts on the reading, develop ideas for class discussion, and maintain a dialogue with the instructor.
- (4) Seminar participation during the semester (20%). This exercise is aimed at familiarizing you with the presentation of careful theoretical arguments and criticisms in an audience of your peers. This requirement is directed at encouraging active involvement in the course's assigned readings and on-going discussion.
